Our 2022 Exhibiting Artists

Each year a specially curated temporary exhibition is displayed in the Sculpture Garden to showcase different styles and the versatility of the sculpture medium. This year we have two new exhibitions of dynamic sculpture for you to enjoy:

Marjan Wouda – Familiar

Marjan Wouda's sculpture takes us into the seemingly familiar realm of animals. Going beyond mere appearance, she delivers telling renditions of their characteristics, pose and behaviours. Adding to that which mother nature has evolved, Wouda often introduces an element of literary anthropomorphism to shape each sculpture's narrative. These stories are rooted in the literature of childhood or the folklore of place; and provide a conceptual landscape that extends the sculptures beyond mere likeness.

Diane Maclean – Lines of Light

Light defines Diane Maclean's sculpture; it is both its subject and means. Her luminous articulation is invariably a linear affair. Maclean often uses linear stainless steel components that have been mechanically burnished to what is described in industry, as 'brushed'. These surfaces are not mirror polished, instead they capture softer, more blurred reflections. This makes them highly responsive to ambient light because their surfaces are not dominated by perfect reflections of the sculpture's surroundings. Instead, they subtly capture the nuances and changes in tone and intensity of sunlight.

The Sculpture Garden

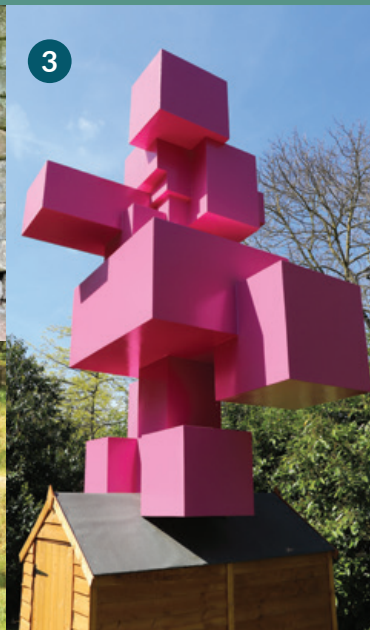

Explore the unique landscape of Lancelot 'Capability' Brown's rediscovered lower gardens. This intriguing and evolving garden, along with its ancient trees, provides a wonderful gallery for Burghley's sculpture collection. An extensive range of styles are exhibited together, including figurative and abstract sculptures in diverse media.

The works are displayed alongside sweeping borders, vibrant plantings and broad drifts of wildflowers. Discover hidden trails and ever-changing vistas as you meander through the beautiful gardens.
